Northstar Office Supplies

Company Knowledge Base

Document purpose

This sample document contains multiple pages of structured business information. It is designed for testing PDF text extraction, page counting, metadata, and later retrieval-augmented generation (RAG) experiments.

1. Company Overview

Northstar Office Supplies is a fictional business that provides stationery, office equipment, workplace furniture, and recurring supply services to small and medium-sized organizations. The company serves customers through an online store and a customer support team.

Mission

Our mission is to make everyday workplace operations simpler by supplying dependable products, clear service information, and responsive customer support.

Core principles

- Reliability: Provide accurate product and delivery information.
- Clarity: Explain prices, policies, and timelines in plain language.
- Service: Resolve customer questions with ownership and follow-through.

2. Products and Services

Northstar organizes its catalogue into four main product groups. Product availability can change, so staff should confirm current stock before promising a dispatch date.

Stationery

This category includes notebooks, printer paper, pens, markers, folders, envelopes, sticky notes, and desk organizers. Standard stationery orders are usually packed within one to two business days after payment confirmation.

Technology accessories

Technology accessories include keyboards, mice, USB hubs, webcams, laptop stands, headsets, and cables. Warranty coverage depends on the manufacturer and is listed on the product page or invoice.

Office furniture

Furniture includes desks, ergonomic chairs, storage cabinets, and meeting-room tables. Some furniture items require scheduled delivery because they are bulky or need assembly.

Recurring supply service

Business customers may request a recurring order for frequently used supplies. The customer chooses the products, quantities, and preferred delivery frequency. The support team reviews each request before confirming the schedule.

Important product-handling note

Never assume that two products have identical specifications just because their names are similar. Check the product code, dimensions, compatibility notes, and warranty details.

3. Orders, Payments, and Delivery

Order processing

An order moves through the following general stages: order received, payment confirmed, items allocated, packed, dispatched, and delivered. Customers should receive an order confirmation after successful checkout.

Payment methods

The fictional company accepts major credit and debit cards, bank transfers for approved business accounts, and selected digital payment methods. A payment is considered complete only after the payment system confirms it.

Delivery estimates

For standard in-stock items, the typical delivery estimate is three to five business days after dispatch within the primary service area. Remote destinations may require additional time. These estimates are not guarantees.

Delayed orders

If an order has not moved for more than two business days beyond its latest tracking update, the support team should check the carrier status and provide the customer with a factual update. Staff must not invent a delivery date.

Order information to collect

- Order number or invoice number
- Customer or business name
- Date the order was placed
- Relevant product codes and quantities

4. Returns, Refunds, and Customer Support

Return requests

Customers should contact support within seven calendar days of receiving an item if it arrives damaged, incorrect, or materially different from its description. The support team may request photographs and the order number to assess the request.

Refund handling

Approved refunds are sent to the original payment method where possible. The time taken for the funds to appear depends on the payment provider or bank. Support staff should communicate the approval status separately from the bank's processing time.

Items that need special review

Customized products, assembled furniture, and items damaged after delivery may require additional review. Do not promise that a return or refund will be approved before the relevant checks are complete.

Support response guidelines

- Acknowledge the customer's question.
- Check the order and policy information available.
- Explain the next step and any information still needed.
- Escalate unresolved or exceptional cases to a supervisor.

5. Frequently Asked Questions

Q: Can a customer change an order after checkout?
A: They should contact support as soon as possible. Changes depend on whether the order has already been allocated or dispatched.

Q: Are delivery estimates guaranteed?
A: No. They are estimates and may change due to carrier or destination conditions.

Q: Where can customers find warranty information?
A: Check the product listing, manufacturer documentation, or purchase invoice.
